such a gathering of forces a challenge and a threat against Piesmont.

We cannot entertain any love for the treaties of 1815. We believe that one day, by the force of circumstances, by the play of time, Europe will perhaps have to sceriffce what remains of them; but we are not of those who perform the builty and propose to march against the world. Policy at times imposes sacrifices, but never tolerates realmess. Germany has, then, nothing to fear. Her alarm may hitherto have been the result of an error, but, as the Monsieur remarks, it would become offensive if persevered in. There can in future exist no misunderstanding in Germany on the subject of the intentions of France and the general character of her policy. If Germany desires peace, she must not compromise it by meances which would offend the national feeling, but must render it service by displaying, like Prussia, that conciliation which alone can calm a powerful and generous nation like France.

[From the Paris Pays, March 17.]

Germany, in fact, is not threatened in the prosent conflict, and it is for her own quarred that Austria would call the Confederation to arms: it is for that purpose that, for the last two months, she incessantly developes belligerent manifestations in all the small German States. But we firmly hope that Austria will not succeed in leading Germany in a cause in which justice and good right could not be on her side: as a proof thereof we only want, outside of the firm and layal attitude of Prussia, the manifestations of public opinion which the German press daily contains. All the newspapers loudly accuse Austria of having taken a proveking attitude in a personal question which is of no interest at all for Germany.

[From the Journal des Débats, March 17.]

If anything can render Austria des to the passing coun-taken a proveking attitude in a personal question which is of no interest at all for Germany.

[From the Journal des Débats, March 17.] If anything can render Austria deaf to the passing councils of England, it is the excitement of Germany, which the Montieur depicts with reason as one of the greatest dangers which menace peace. If Germany, to fact, persists in allowing itself to be deceived with respect to the real intentions and moderate views of the French government; if its excitement is sustained, or should increase, what would be more calculated to encourage Austria in resistance which might become fatal to the peace of the world? Certainly Austria would not be thereby released from the grave responsibility which she would have incurred by rejecting the most prudent advice, and by rendering impossible any honorable arrangement. But this painful responsibility would be shared between her and that hotheaded fraction of the press which, by the imprudent assertious, constantly dealed, and as often repeated, has created amongst our neighbors that mistrust and irritation which the French government wisely seeks to appease. We, however, entertain the firm hope that Germany will finish by giving greater credit to the French government speaking for itself than to those who pretend—we know not on what authority—to speak in its name and to direct its steps. Germany, in cessing to display excessive sospicion towards France, would deprive austria of the sole encouragement which might lead her to reject the advice of her allies, and render her insensible to the advantages of peace.

[From the Independance Belge, March 17.]

It is a positive fact that the uneasiness of the public has hereased anew, and that the necessity of a solution in one sense or another is more and more felt. Even war, if it was to break out, and if its bearing was well determined, would have a less perincions influence upon business than those alternations of hope and despair by which public polition is tossed.

We can state that, outside of the action of diplomacy,

We can state that, outside of the action of diplomacy, the spirit of antagonism is increasing in Italy between Austria and the populations subjected to her dominion; and what is more, in Germany the sentiments of the States, after having been turned against France, no longer spare the government of the Emperor Francis Joseph.

[From Le Nord, March 17.]

The paragraph in which it is said that France tries above all to resove the Italian question with the concurrence of her allies and for the peace of the world, is the principal topic in diplomatic circles. One infers from it that the French government will enture the diplomacy the cure of preventing a conflict, or, at least, try to confine it within the narrowest possible limits. We have reason to helieve that it will succeed in its object.

THE WAR FEELING IN SARDINIA.

INTERESTING INTELLIGENCE FROM PIEDMONT-THE INHABITANTS IN FAVOR OF WAR AGAINST AUSTRIA, WITH OR WITHOUT FRANCE—INDIGNATION AGAINST THE COURSE OF THE BRITISH CABINET—GEN. LAWARMORA TO TAKE THE COMMAND OF THE PIEDMONTESE ARMY—REVOLUTION IMMINENT—THE DELIVERANCE OF THE NEAPOLITAN EXILES. We have already learned considerably from the English and French press of the state of feeling in Sardinia on the

r question, and the measures taken by the government Victor Emmanuel with that eventuality in view. Yes Our informant reports there is great excitement throughout all the kingdom of Sardinia, and a war against Austria is not only anticipated, but eagerly looked for by the people. The Austrians are making extensive preparations on the boundary line between Lombardy and Piedmont; they have also occupied the independent dukedom of Parma and Piacenza. This last city was exceedingly well fortided, and the Austrians are now endeavoring to make it stronger. Near it they have built a temporary fortress in a strategic position, which is within the military line of defence of Sardinian territory. Hearing of this, the King of Sardinia immediately summoned a council of statesmen, presided over by Count Sciopis, and before them was placed the question whether Austria was acting or not in open violation of the treaties and of international laws. The council having answered in the affirmative, their verdict was despatched both to Paris and to London. Both the people and the government in Sardinia are in dignant at the conduct of England, who pretended to be friendly to them, and has turned out their betterest opponent. The last protest of the English Cabinet about Sardinia receiving deserters from the Austrian army has produced a great exasperation of feeling. Several young men destined to be forcibly incorporated in the Austrian army have, in fact, fled from Lombardy to Sardinia, and were cordiaily received. But the event not being publicly known and avowed, England was not expected to act as police for Austria. This question of the deserters, however, is a serious one: for Austria has large number of Haliam soldiery, all forcibly enrolled in the Amstrian army have, in fact, fied from Lombardy to Sardinia, and were cordially received. But the event not being publicly known and avowed, England was not expected to act as police for Austria. This question of the deserters, however, is a serious one; for Austria has a large number of Italian soldiery, all forcibly enrolled and detained, who will not ose their arms against their own kinsmen, and prefer to take the side of Sardinia. It is a fact that in 1848 and 1849 the Italian soldiery in the service of Austria could not be compelled to fight against the revolutionists, and deserted when they were offered chance of doing so.

Our informant does not seem to share the opinion so common both in this country and in England, that the King of Sardinia, It lift alone against Austria would be immediately crushed and destroyed. It appears that Austria, though possessed of 150,000 troops in Italy, requires them to keep down the Lombards and the Vetwianas, naturally enough greatly excited, and by every appearance ready for a general revolution. In addition, Austria must have all her fortreeses weil garrisoned, and keep her long millary line from Ancona to the Alps. A great want of money also diminishes significantly the strength and the activity of the Austrian army.

Sardinia, on the contrary, can easily and speedily move all her fortreeses weil garrisoned, and keep her long millary line from Ancona to the Alps. A great want of money also diminishes significantly the strength and the activity of the Austrian army.

Sardinia, on the contrary, can easily and speedily move all her fortreeses weil garrisoned, and keep her long millary line from their confidence of the King, both having been intimate friends from their youth. The General is still young, and a thorough military man. During the struggles in 1848 and 1849 he had a command, and showed great courses and the one of the confidence of the King, both having been intimate friends from their youth. The General is still young, and a thorough military man. Duri sire the aid of the French Emperor, as he himself to give it and take a part in their quarrel against Austria for his own purposes.

The Neapolitan exiles who landed in Ireland are expected to proceed immediately to Sardinia. There are among them several very intelligent statesmen of great influence in Italy. Their presence in Sardinia will doubtless aid to the present entauciasm for liberty. Two mouths spent at sea since they left their dangeons, and the new hopes smilling on their favorite cause, seem to have influence and vigor into their constitutions, and they are wonder julip well, beyond anything anticipated by their friends. Rafacilo Scitembrini, the young mate who, in diaguase, went on board the David Sewart in order to resome has father, Luigi Scitembrini, from boing brought to this country against his will and at the immium danger of his life, is a fine youth about ulineteen years of age. He is represented as a very talented youth. After ois rather's incarceration in the Neapolitan dangeous, he recursed in laiy and was educated and supported by the frien is of hie pariot father. Soing improved by the frien is of hie pariot father. Boing improved by the frien is of hie pariot father, their group about delivering his father, he was apprehended and exiled. Mr. Panizzi, the direction of the British fusesom, hunted an exile from Haly, and a warm friend of Luigi Fettembrini, invited the young Rafaello Scitembrini to London, gave him means for continuing his education, of mate in the Galway line of steamers. We are informed that Mr. Panizzi had written to this city a note to be delivered to Luigi Settembrini on his expected arrival, containing a draft for a large sum of money. It is easy to imagine the joy of the poor prisoner, Settembrini, who having left ten years before his boy unprotected and destitute, found him on the morning of his liberation a promising officer, full of life and daring, ready to take the command of the ship and be the deliverer of his father and the whole patriot band.

INDIA RUBBER GLOVES AND MITTENS!

Great improvements have been made to the manufacture of these goods of late, and we can now recommend them for general use. The heavy gloves and mittens are unrivalled as a protection in all kinds of ncid work of the chemis, draggist and photographist, manufacturing and handling of potsahes and other atrong alkalise; for oyntermen, dirivers is storings, and hose companies in the fire department. We would particularly call the attention of farmers, mechanise, hatters, tanners, milkmen and lumbermen to these gloves and mittens as being well adapted to their use. They are superior to the brack mitten, especially in wet work. The light gloves are used for softening and biesching the hands. As a speedy and effectual cure for chapped or rough hands, salt rheum, &c., they have no equal; are very useful while engaged in domestic atlairs, such as sweeping, dusting, house cleaning, and are invaluable in attending to coal fires, a requisite in every family for westing, coloring, all rougheoing and dirty kinds of work, and particularly useful in gardening and care of shrubs and flowers. For sale by rubber dealers generally.
